

Too many interesting things to do!

Hi, I'm Filip and I've got a problem. I am so tired I sometimes fall asleep in the middle of the school lesson. My friends tell me I should rest more, but I can't. There are too many interesting things to do every day!

My favourite day is Friday. It's when the school is over, so I go out with my friends and play some basketball. In the evening, my family goes to the cinema or has friends over at our house. The next day we go hiking or shopping – and sometimes both. Of course, that is why I have to do all the homework and clean my room the day before the school starts.

With the weekdays also come my different after-school activities. First, I have my tennis practice. The next day, my sister and I have guitar lessons. The same day there is also the Astronomy Club, which I can't miss, because we have lots of fun. I usually help my neighbour, old Mrs Novak, the following afternoon, and afterwards I sometimes go to the pool.

The day before Friday I have programming lessons, and then everything starts again. Help – what should I do?

Tasks:

- Make a time-table of Filip's activities. What does he do each day?
- Write him a letter and give some advice.
- Write a short text about your own week. What do you do and when?
