

My favourite room

Hi, my name is Akira and I'm from Japan. I live in a traditional Japanese house with my family. I don't have my own room, but I have a favourite room in our house. It is the living room.

Our living room is very large. There aren't any doors, but there are sliding walls, which can be moved when you want to go out.

In Japan, there aren't many sofas. We have cushions on the floor, where we sit.

We have two low tables, but they aren't coffee tables. We prefer to drink tea.

We don't have a lot of furniture. There are some bookshelves, and wardrobes built into the wall, so you can't see them very well.

There aren't carpets, but we have rugs. We also like to have plants in our home.

In the picture there is a small tree under the bookshelves and next to the wardrobe.

You can also see our bathroom behind a wall panel. It is white and there is a washbasin and a shower.

What I like best about my living room are the big windows. I do my homework there or just sit and watch the sea, the sky and the sun.
